Dr. Frazier's Root Bitters.

Frazier's Root Bitters are not a dram-shop whisky beverage, but are strictly medicinal in every sense. They act strongly upon the liver and kidneys, keep the bowels open and regular, make the weak strong, heal the lungs, build up the nerves and cleanse the blood and system of every impurity.

For dizziness, rush of blood to the head tending to apoplexy, dyspepsia, fever and ague, dropsy, pimples and blotches, scrofulous humors and sores, tetter, ring worm, white swelling, erysipelas, sore eyes and for young men suffering from weakness or debility caused from imprudence, and to females in delicate health, Frazier's Root Bitters are especially recommended.

Dr. Frazier: I have used two bottles of your Root Bitters for dyspepsia, dizziness, weakness and kidney disease, and they did me more good than the doctors and all the medicine I ever used. From the first dose I took I began to mend, and I am now in perfect health, and feel as well as I ever did. I consider your medicine one of the greatest blessings.

How the Mormons Regard It.

Deseret News, Salt Lake, Utah.

We take the following from the Deseret News, Salt Lake City, Utah, to give our readers an idea of "How the Mormons Regard It."

While nearly the whole country has been ablaze with excitement over "Mormon" affairs, Utah, has been comparatively calm and serene. The news of the Edmunds bill was received with equanimity. The Senate proceedings were read with interest, but no excitement, and the telegram which brought word of the doings of the House was received in the same spirit. The bill is regarded by the Mormon people not as an honest attempt to suppress polygamy, but as a scheme to place the control of public affairs in Utah in the hands of persons who are and will be in hostility to the majority of the citizens.

Congress, which has enacted the measure is divided itself on the exact meaning of its provisions. Some of them are capable of more than one construction, and not a little difficulty will be experienced in determining which is the legal rendering. This will suit the lawyers and give work for the courts, and will involve some trouble and expense. But the thing over which the country has enraged itself will remain comparatively untouched. The people who have been holding meetings and signing petitions had one thing in view, the framers of the Edmunds bill another.

It will be found that the public has been fooled, while the plotting politicians have succeeded, so far, in their endeavors. But though they have apparently gained a victory, time and the workings of the law will evolve troubles that they have not counted upon, and there is a power at work in Mormonism which they always leave out of their calculations. That Power is beyond the control of congresses and courts, and will, in the future as in the past, over-rule everything that is done or attempted, so that it will redound to the benefit of the system and the good of adherents. Of this we are as sure as the sun arose this morning in its splendor, just as though the Edmunds bill was unborn, and indeed, shone brighter, and clearer, and pleasanter than for the space of several months before. There is no need for any excitement and no cause for any alarm among the Latter day Saints. We do not anticipate any. Then during the whole of the present agitation they were never more placid and undisturbed. And those who have felt any concern over the bill which now awaits the Presidential signature, were more exercised in regard to the provisions which will affect all classes of the people alike than over those sections which are ostensibly aimed at the marriage relations of the few. For the former are undoubtedly a departure from that glorious instrument which guards the liberties of this Republic, and the plain and determined purposes of disregarding its limitations and violating its decrees in order to break down a religious organization, argues the likelihood of its still further strides in the same direction, to result in the entire departure, at not distant date, from the principles upon which the safety of this government depends. This, to us, is the most deplorable feature in the special legislation devised against the "Mormons."

An old saying is, "A still tongue makes a wise head." We suggest this adage for the consideration of the impulsive. And we assure our friends that such difficulties as will be created and fostered by the mischievous measure soon to become a law, will, in the end, glorify our God and further the interests of His cause to which we have devoted ourselves. And meanwhile, those difficulties will certainly not perplex the Mormons alone; they who helped to make them, or would not try to prevent them, will surely share in the injury that will result to the material interests of the Territory.

THE President has nominated Mrs. Ross to be postmistress at Newport.

Stories as Tall as a House.

The Western frontier of our country is highly prolific in tall stories. Take the matter of hard blows. A man sitting in his house, eating a pie, heard a storm coming, and ran to the door. The gale first blew the house down, and then seized the man, carried him through the air a hundred yards or so, and landed him in a peach tree. Soon afterward a friendly board from his own house came floating by. This he seized and placed over his head to protect himself from the raging blast, and finished his pie. Out in Nevada it has been told that during a gale, while boulders as big as pumpkins were flying through the air, and water-pipes were being ripped out of the ground, an old Chiman, with spectacles on his nose, was observed in the eastern part of the town seated on a knoll, calmly flying his kite—an iron shutter, with a log chain for a tail. There was a man from Boston who would not confess astonishment at anything he saw in Nevada. As he was passing a hotel in Virginia City the cap blew from one of the chimneys. It was a circular piece of sheet-iron, painted black, slightly convex, and the four supports were like legs. The wind carried it down street, and it went straddling along like a living thing. The Boston man asked what it was. "A bed-bug from the hotel," was the reply. "By George, I never saw anything like that," he began, and then added, "outside of Boston."

A party of miners in the Black Hills compared eyes and ears over a camp-fire. One said: "When I was coming to the hills I looked for Indians until I could see a mosquito a mile away." Another said that his eyes were weak, but that he could hear gnats jumping on the rocks four miles. The next man had listened for Indians until he heard the mountain sheep light on their horns in the Big Mountains, three hundred miles away. The fourth with his head on his pillows, had strained his ears until he heard the Chinese nailing up tea boxes. The fifth, in crossing the Rocky Mountains, had found a petrified forest, the trees turned into solid stone. As he loitered on the edge, a deer started across the valley and was transformed in a moment into solid stone. A bird flew past him, and perching upon a tree began to sing. Suddenly the bird was changed to stone. The song she was singing was also petrified, hanging down from the beak of the bird—cold, cold stone.

A Yankee who had settled in the West having told an Englishman that he had shot on one particular occasion nine hundred and ninety-nine pigeons, his interlocutor asked why he did not make it a thousand at once. "No," said he, "not likely I'm going to tell a lie for one pigeon." Whereupon the Englishman, determined not to be outdone, began to tell a long story of a man having swam from Liverpool to Boston. "Did you see him?" asked the Yankee. Of course I did; I was coming across and our vessel passed a mile out of Boston harbor." "Well, I'm glad ye saw him stranger, 'cos yer a witness that I did it. That was me!"—Brooklyn Eagle.

To convince the friends of the survivors of the Jeannette who are located at Irkutsk, that those brave men are not suffering for the necessities of life, we take the following from a recent volume published in England and America by Henry Landell: The markets of Irkutsk are well supplied. Fish and game are plentiful. Beef is abundant and good and costs about two cents a pound. Frozen chickens, partridges and other game are often thrown together in heaps like bricks or firewood. Butchers' meat defies the knife, and some of the salesmen place their animals in fantastic positions before freezing them. Frozen fish are piled in stacks and milk is offered for sale in cakes or bricks. A stick or string is generally congealed into a corner of the mass to facilitate carrying so that a wayfarer can swing a quart of milk at his side or wrap it in his handkerchief at discretion.

THE GOLDEN CITY.

Full Particulars of the Disaster—Thirty-Five Lives Lost.

Stowe's Circus and Menagerie and Several Barges Destroyed.

MEMPHIS, TENN., March 31, 1882.—The Golden City when landing here at 4:30 a. m., Thursday, was discovered on fire.

The boat was at once headed for shore, and in four minutes she touched the wharf at the foot of Scale street, where a coal fleet is moored. A line was thrown and made fast to one of the coal barges, but the current being swift, it parted, and burning, the steamer floated down the river, a mass of flames with many of her passengers and crew aboard, who were unable to reach the shore were lost. The Golden City left New Orleans last Saturday en route to Cincinnati.

She carried a crew of about sixty. She had aboard forty cabin passengers, fifteen of whom were ladies and nine children. Her cargo consisted of three hundred tons among which was a lot of jute. The fire is said to have had its origin in this combustible material.

Among those known to have been lost are:

Dr. Monohan and wife, Jackson, Ohio.
Mrs. Cray, Cincinnati.
Miss Luella Cray, Winton Place.
W. H. Stowe, wife and two children.
Ollie Wood, Henderson, Ky.
Mrs. Anna Smith, Massachusetts.
Miss Campbell, Burlington, O.
Mrs. Helen Percival.
Mrs. L. E. Kounz and three children, of Burlington, O.

All the officers of the steamer safe, except the second engineer, Robert Kelly. He it was who first discovered the fire and gave the alarm, and remained at his post of duty until cut off by the flames.

Nearly all the cabin and deck crew of the steamer saved themselves. Stowe's circus was taken aboard at Vidalia, La., and six cages of animals and birds, together with a ticket and band wagon, tents and horses, were lost. Marion Purcell, one of the pilots, was in the clerk's office when the alarm first sounded, and he rushed through the cabin bursting in the state-room doors, and awakening the passengers.

So rapid did the flames spread that within five minutes after the discovery of the fire, which broke out amidship, the aft part of the steamer was all ablaze. Those that were saved had to flee in their night clothes. When the burning steamer touched the wharf the fire communicated to a coal fleet and the tug Oriole, which were also burned.

As near as can be ascertained, there were twenty-three ladies aboard but two of whom were saved.

J. H. Cronk, connected with Stowe's circus, is missing, supposed to be lost. John Devouse, his wife and three children were saved. Also, Simon Black.

It is estimated that thirty-five lives were lost.

The fire was caused by the watchman accidentally setting fire to a lot of jute which was stored amidships the steamer. She had just whistled to land and the watchman went among the deck passengers to notify them that Memphis was being approached, and those that were destined for here must get ashore. The bottom of his lamp dropped into some jute, and before the flames could be extinguished spread all over the deck of the steamer.

Brice Purcell, the pilot, made his escape by climbing over the front of the pilot house as the fire was all in the rear of him when the steamer touched wharf. The tug Oriole did not burn, as at first reported, but was sunk by the burning steamer in making the landing.

All the rescued passengers on the ill-fated steamer Golden City had a narrow escape and thrilling adventure. Pilot Purcell remained in the pilot house until enveloped by smoke with flames leaping around him, battling with desperation to effect a landing. When he first attempted it the tug Oriole was run down and three negroes, who leaped aboard of the tug at the moment she went down, were seen no more.

W. C. Jewett says he was awakened by a cry of fire and sprang out of the bunk, but the floor was so hot it was torture to stand upon it. He gathered up his clothes and reached under the bunk to get his valise, when suddenly the flames broke through the floor and licked his face. He got out into the cabin, which he found full of smoke, and had to crawl to the guards, escaping to the deck by sliding down a spar he made his toilet on the river bank.

Among the circus horses lost was the noted Selim. Three trick horses promptly obeyed the call of the keeper and sprang ashore. A buffalo broke his halter and dashed through the crowd to the bank; every hair was burned from his hide, he having passed through the fire.

Mrs. Stowe, wife of the proprietor of the show, was lost. She was formerly Lizzie Marcellus, once Barnum's greatest attraction.

A bear, which escaped, swam to a skiff in mid stream and climbed in. The skiffman was in doubt whether to swim for it or to remain, and as the bear quietly laid down he buckled to his oars and pulled his strange passenger ashore, where the circus people took charge of it. One man clung to the buffalo, which swam ashore with him.

The scene as the boat drifted out into the stream was heart-rendering, the cries of men and shrieks of women rising above the roar of the flames.

In addition to the names already sent of the saved are John Masten, Willie McKinley and James Myers, of Henderson, Ky.; John Devouse, wife and three children, and Simson Block.

A man named Butler, who was on the ill-fated steamer with his wife and three children, had the most thrilling escape of all. When the alarm was given he dragged his wife and children out into the cabin, which was filled with smoke, and finally managed to get them to the head of the stairway, up which the flames rushed in a grand volume, cutting off escape by that means.

Butler saw a man standing on the swinging stage plank, and called out to catch his babies. The man stood firm, and Butler threw the two youngest children one at a time into his arms, and he put them in places of safety. The eldest girl thirteen years old was next thrown, but the man below was unable to catch her and she fell to the deck further. He then helped his wife to a spar, down which they slid to the deck. The insensible girl was then picked up from the deck, and and all escaped.

Only one body as yet has been recovered, which is thought to be that of captain Kounts' wife. She was much disfigured by fire.

Pat. Haley and Mike O'Donnell, the two firemen who were on watch, say they saw the negro captain of the watch named Wash, with his lamp in his hand looking for some of the deck crew, and it was from his lamp that the fire caught the jute stored in the center of the steamer, and as quick as flash spread to either side of the steamer and up to the cabin.

Haley ran up stairs to notify the chief engineer, but by the time he reached the hurricane deck the flame had mounted almost to the pilot-house, and he was driven back by the fire. He then rang the alarm bell, and, seeing the boat was approaching the shore, ran down the forward stairs and jumped on board the tug Oriole just as the Golden City struck her. Seeing the tug was sinking he sprang aboard the steamer again and made his way to the coal barge lying along the side. Two negro deck hands and a white deck passenger were killed when the tug was struck as they were caught between the bow of the boat and the side of the tug.

Anna Boyd, the colored chambermaid, and her assistant were both lost. Mike Molloy and Pat. Kinney, firemen, were saved; also M. J. Whelan, second baker. Whelan says he jumped overboard from the stern of the steamer as she floated down stream.

There were about ten men on the fantail of the boat, who must have been drowned, as when he leaped into the river he saw three men go overboard and drown; others must have shared the same fate.

Felix Lehman, who was a passenger, says there was a merry party aboard, and nearly all the passengers remained up until midnight. They had one or two gentlemen aboard who played the piano, and they entertained the passengers with music and singing.

RIPLEY is getting up a petition to the President asking for the pardon of Sargeant Mason.

It is said there will be more circuses on the road the coming summer than for many years past.

JACK DOWNS, who killed James Jackson near Higginsport, Ohio, last fall has been acquitted on the ground that the deed was done in self-defense.

JOHN NELSON charged with burning Mr. Huffman's house at Ripley last week, at his preliminary trial was held to appear at the higher court, and in default of $200 bail was sent to the lockup at Georgetown.

MR. ROBERT FICKLIN, SR., requests us to say that he has this day planted a walnut tree at the gate of his residence on Fourth street, and challenges the property owners on that street as far as the Lexington turnpike, to follow his example.

THE recent walking match by boys at the Trotting Park was an impromptu affair gotten up by a few lads who happened to be there that day. The Fair Company knew nothing about it, and we are informed, have forbidden such things in future.

THE remains of Mr. James Fairfax Willett, who died at St. Louis a few days ago, arrived in Maysville last night, and to be laid to rest with his kindred in the cemetery. The funeral took place this afternoon at three o'clock from the Christian Church after services by Eld. J. B. Briney.

W. H. STOWE and family, who are reported to have been lost on the steamer Golden City, were in this city in May, 1881, with Dan Rice's circus. When the company went to pieces it was reorganized by Mr. Stowe and again put upon the road, the opening exhibition being given at Aberdeen.

THE court of appeals will consider the case of Craft and Neal, the condemned murderers on the 10th of April. If the court does not interfere they will be hanged on the 14th of April. The Governor has stated that he will not respite them unless the citizens of Ashland ask it, which they are not likely to do.

THE entertainment by Sullivan's Hibernian Blondes, announced to be given at the opera house next Saturday will not take place. A lot of hand bills distributed about the city indicated that the exhibition would be of an improper character, and influenced Mayor January to refused to grant a license to the troupe. It will not appear here at the time named.

PERSONALS.

Points About People Here and Elsewhere.

Mr. Wilson Hill and Miss Jennie Ridgley, were married yesterday, in the parlor of the St. James Hotel at Cincinnati, by the Rev. G. W. Kelley. They arrived at home last night.

The following is from the Ashland Independent.

C. M. Phister, of Maysville, and Ed Kirker, of Ironton, both recently on the Potomac, are now on the Telegraph. Carl Crawford is also in the office of that boat, as of old. No trio of steamboat clerks on the river are more efficient or clever men. If you want to be made to feel at home when traveling take the old reliable Telegraph.

THE steamer George Lysle passed up the river this morning with her flag at half-mast.

THE following marriage licenses have been issued in Brown county, Ohio, since our last report:

John Faul and Caroline Waters.
August Werner and Anna Cormick.
A. T. Howland and M. J. Kendall.
James M. Day and Helena Knoche.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Catlettsburg Democrat writing from Ashland, says:

Ashland people assure me that the coat lately found is Neal's beyond a doubt. Governor Blackburn has assured leading citizens that he will neither pardon, nor respite the Ashland murderers except upon the statement of the citizens of this county. The statements recently made in the Cincinnati papers that Judges Brown and Ireland, had expressed to the Governor doubts as to the guilt of these parties are pronounced by them deliberate falsehoods. There is something rotten in Lexington, Ky.

MISS LIZZIE BURROWS is the agent in this city of the New York lace house, formerly represented by Mrs. Taylor. She receives a fresh supply every week of laces and notions of the latest and most attractive styles. Those who need anything in this line should call upon Miss Burrows at the millinery establishment of Mrs. George Burrows.

A NEW theory as to the cause and spread of pink-eye is now being advanced. It is believed that owing to the drought of last summer, which extended over nearly every section of the country, a larger amount of dust, grit and refuse matter than usual settled upon the hay crop, and that this hay fed to perfectly healthy horses produces irritation and consequently disease. It is further believed that if hay is wet thoroughly before being fed to horses there will be less probability of the animals taking the disease.

THE Irontonian published at Ironton, O., says:

J. H. Pemberton, one of the Sheriff's deputies, went to Maysville last week, and brought back Mrs. Elizabeth Leisure, whom Marshal Fitzgerald, of that city, arrested on a boat at the mouth of Cabin creek. It will be remembered that Mrs. Leisure shot and killed Moses Markin on the evening of the 4th of July last, at her house just beyond the Warren hill on the Ironton and Marion road. Markin went to her house and commenced to abuse and threaten her. She ordered him off her premises. He refused to go, and she fired at him with a 32-calibre pistol, killing him almost instantly. Why she was discharged, after being bound over as a result of preliminary hearing, we do not now remember; but it is stated that the grand jury failed to report an indictment. She has since been indicted, however, and, when arraigned in the Court of Common Pleas last week, she had a baby at her breast. Being asked, after the indictment was read, whether she was guilty or not guilty, she shook her head and said, "Yes, I am guilty. I killed him," and burst into tears. Several attorneys cried, "No, no, that's not your plea." The woman, still sobbing, said, "Oh, I don't know anything about law." Messrs. Enoch and Leete having stated that they defended her at her preliminary trial before the Mayor, the Court appointed them to conduct her defense. The scene at her arraignment was very affecting.

LATER.

The trial of Elizabeth Leisure for manslaughter, which has occupied the attention of the Court the greater part yesterday and this forenoon, terminated at one and half o'clock to-day by the jury returning a verdict of not guilty.

He was awakened by having his state-room burst in and hearing the cry of fire. Seizing his clothes, he ran forward and reached the barge just in time, as the next minute the vessel floated down the stream. The body of an elderly white woman was found floating near the wreck, but her identity has not yet been proven.

Stowe's Circus was en route for Cairo, where the spring season was to be opened. A portion of the show is at Vicksburg. Will. McIntyre, the clerk of the boat, says the list is lost. The list of cabin passengers, as well as he can remember, is correct. Mrs. L. E. Kouns and her three children, who were lost, was the wife of Captain Kouns, the well-known steamboat owner. Those mentioned as being at the hospital are all injured by burns, but not seriously. The passengers lost all their clothing. Those that were saved had to flee for their lives, without taking time to save their effects.

Robt. Kelley, who is reported as having lost his life at his post of duty, was a son of the Chief Engineer.

Captain Hegler says he was a stout young fellow and a powerful swimmer, and thinks he may have jumped overboard at the last moment and reached the shore. He also says that many persons may have provided themselves with life preservers and committed themselves to the water, and without absolute knowledge of their loss some hopes for their safety may be entertained, as President's Island was directly below the place where the boat finally sunk.

He received numerous telegrams about the disaster, and was in much anxiety of mind, owing to the fearful reports received from other sources of great loss of life. The latest telegram the Captain received was as follows:

MEMPHIS, March 30.

Captain J. D. Hegler:

The boat caught fire in the deck room at 5 a. m. Fifteen passengers are lost, but the crew is all safe with the exception of the second engineer. After the fire was discovered the boat was dropped down to the coal fleet below the wharboat. The wreck is sunk in twenty feet of water at the head of President's Island. STERLING C. MCINTYRE.

The Golden City was five years old and cost $54,000, insured for $30,000 in Cincinnati offices. She was owned by Captain J. D. Hegler, W. F. McIntyre and S. C. McIntyre. She lies sunk about three miles below here in the chute near the Tennessee shore.

Poe, the Poet, Murdered.

Dr. J. J. Moran, of Falls Church Va., in a lecture upon the death of Poe, said: As the shades of evening descended upon Baltimore, Poe had rambled on until he had reached a dangerous portion of the town, where it was unsafe for a man to loiter alone. Here the men who had been following came up with him and he was forced into a low den, where he was drugged, robbed, stripped of his apparel and then clothed in the filthy rags of one of the brutes who had assaulted him. From this place he was thrust into the street, and as he staggered along, his brain benumbed by the deadly drug, he fell over an obstacle in his pathway and lay insensible for hours exposed to the cutting October air. A gentleman passing recognized the face of Poe as he lay prone upon the street, and calling a hack he directed that he be conveyed to the Washington Hospital, sending his card to Dr. Moran, with the single word "Poe" written in the corner. Poe was cared for, and received energetic medical treatment to counteract the effect of his depressed condition. During this time Dr. Moran said to him:

"How do you feel, Mr. Poe?"
"Miserable."
"Do you suffer any pain?"
"No."
"How long have you been sick?"
"I cannot say."

As Poe's last hours approached Dr. Moran said that he bent over him and asked if he had any word he wished communicated to his friends. Poe raised his fading eyes and answered, "Nevermore." In a few moments he turned uneasily and moaned: "O God, is there no ransom for the deathless spirit?" Continuing, he said: "He who rode the heavens and upholds the universe has decrees written on the frontlet of every human being." Then followed mumbling, growing fainter and fainter, then a tremor of the limbs, a faint sigh, and the spirit of Edgar Allen Poe had passed the boundary line that divides time from eternity.—Washington Post.

As to the pay for his poems, Longfellow said:

"The Psalm of Life" and "The Reaper" appeared in the Knickerbocker and were never paid for at all. "The Voices of the Night" were printed in the United States Literary Gazette and the compensation was dubious. Mr. Longfellow having been informed on one occasion that the sum of $13 was subject to his order for two prose articles and one poem, declined the so-called honorarium and accepted a set of Chatterton's works, which are still in his library. For his contributions to another periodical, covering some two or three years, he got a receipted bill for the same period.

It does not appear that Bob Ingersoll is much better than he was. This is the way he opened a lecture in New York last Sunday evening.

"If this God will allow countries to go to war, he will let a man think. I have the right to think. Would God make a fish and damn him for swimming? Your brain thinks in spite of you. Yet we are told that there is a god who gave us a brain and then punishes us for using it. In speaking of Christianity I wish you to understand I mean Orthodox Christianity. I find that the nation nearest orthodoxy is the poorest.

THERE is nothing in this cold world which so stirs our sympathies as an authenticated instance of filial affection. When a witch was condemned to the stake she asked of her son a drink of water. "No, mother," was the dutiful reply; "it would be wrong to give it to you, because the drier you are the better you will burn."—New York Herald.

"STOLE any chickens this week, Brudder Jones?" said a class-leader to a member of suspiciously thieving proclivities. "No, sah—tänk de Lor'." "You've done well," said the leader, and passed on, while "Brudder Jones" turns to "Brudder Brown," and whispers: "Lucky he said chickens; if he'd said ducks he'd had me suah!"

LAST week at Los Angeles a married woman eloped with her coachman, in consequence of which her husband shot himself. The next day his daughter, who was also in love with the coachman, went insane, while the servant-girl, who was turned out on the defunct husband, tried to drown herself three times. We shall get out an extra as soon as we learn of the course taken by the household in the matter.—Derrick Dodd.

BATCHELDER'S Ventilated Egg Case.

Patented February 15, 1881.

Indispensible to Merchants Shippers
And Producers.

The outside frame of this carrier contains five trays, held in place by fasteners at end of case, as seen in cut. These Trays are constructed in reversible halves. The above cut shows one whole tray filled ready to be placed in case, each egg resting in its cardboard socket in such a manner as to be readily counted, candled, or transferred from tray to tray, or case to case, without rehandling.

For cold storage this case will store 60 dozen with racks made to receive the half trays, hence this is the cheapest storage case manufactured, saving largely in space.

The manner of holding the eggs on end prevents oscillation, adding, or breaking, and adds greatly to their freshness when carried long in storage. Size of 30 dozen No. 1 cases 25x12x14, weighs 20 pounds.

PRICES IN CHICAGO.

Shipper's No. 1, 30 doz. Case with Fillers complete.....65 Cents.
